

PROBE BROKER'S DEATH DESPITE SUICIDE REPORT

GREENWICH, Ct., Feb. 8.—Deserted declarations by physicians and the members of the family that William A. Steadman, rich New York stock broker, committed suicide, Coroner J. J. Phelan announced today that he intended to make an investigation tomorrow concerning the queer and unusual news by which the broker met his death. Coroner Phelan did not interfere with the funeral arrangements and the body was buried today.

The investigation of the coroner will hinge on these questions: Is it possible for a man to strike himself on the back of the head with an axe or hatchet with sufficient force to splinter the skull?

Could the man have done this himself after driving a "silver-headed" bullet into his neck for another reason?

The attending doctors took the victim's relatives to task that the broker took his own life. Dr. W. L. Graywood, head physician at the Greenwich Hospital, where Steadman died, made this statement today: "Steadman was a powerful, muscular man, and of course he was not inclined to fear it. Any ordinary man could have been unconscious by that time. After I saw him die, I was convinced that he had killed himself with the hatchet and then the knife was driven into the wound. This caused his death."

It is believed the President approves of the union policies of the three anti-imperialists and also favors the elevation of William C. Cullen, to be Democratic State chairman.

MISS ALICE A. MA CHIEF, who promised to marry Jack Binns (shown below), wireless fame, TO BE MARRIED

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Jack B. Binns, the wireless operator of the steamer Republic, who had the honor of being the first to send the first of the messages of that vessel when it was wrecked off Nantuxet January 22, 1906, is to be married in June to Miss Alice A. McNiff of Flatbush. The engagement was announced today.

The engagement is the happy result of a romance that began in January, 1911, when Mr. Binns met Miss McNiff at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Tenney, in River Edge, N. J. He was then wireless operator of the Adriatic, under Captain J. J. Smith, who subsequently lost his life in the Titanic disaster.

There came a series of accidents into the life of the young wireless hero after that River Edge visit.

Thenceforth the sea had laid out a path for him. He was absorbed in the scientific development of the wireless, and when not engaged in refueling ships, he was experimenting with an apparatus.

River Edge visited it. The voyage over sea became more and more absorbing, especially on the eastern trip. The first meeting on this side was the last of his existence. The personal life of Jack Binns became a New York story. He joined the staff of the AMERI- the day before the Titanic wreck, and his expert knowledge of conditions of the sea and the compass and immediacy of the future of the sea in the wrecking of the ship. He was a son of the sea, and his life was a story of the sea.

He said he did not come to talk. His wife, as usual, delivered a powerful reason for him. He went to Washington.

VANDERBILT TUBERCULOSIS CURE SUCCESS

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—A year of experiment in isolating, in Vanderbilt model mansions, families that have been made dependent by tubercular conditions among their members has been completed. It is one of the results of the disease, but in working to a marked extent the rehabilitation of the families, according to a report made public by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

In a home hospital, twenty-seven families, seventy-seven members of which were tubercular, lived during the year. The report says, "The majority of the families were of the middle class, but ample sunshine and fresh air, good and abundant nourishment, freedom from undue work and worry, reasonable segregation, skilled medical care and constant nursing supervision."

Eleven of these families, containing twenty-three tubercular patients, were discharged during the year. Six of the eleven families were rehabilitated, physically, mentally and economically. The other five had to be dismissed for refusal to follow advice. The condition of these, however, was improved. The view is expressed that a way has thus been found to prevent the spread of tuberculosis in congested districts, and to reduce the cost of caring for families whose dependency is the result of consumption.

TO FIGHT 'FEEDS'

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The advance guard of baseball magnates, officials, managers and players have arrived here to attend the annual meetings of the American, National and International Leagues, which will be held in this city during the week.

The International League will convene today, the National League tomorrow and the American League on Wednesday. The adoption of schedules for the coming season will be the principal task at all three sessions.

Probably on Thursday, the club-owners of the National and the American Leagues will meet in a joint conference with the National Commission, chairman; Governor Tamm and Judge Johnson.

At this session an entirely new scheme to protect minor and major league territory will be suggested. It will be outlined by a prominent manager, that the formation of a new major league, to be operated under the protection of organized baseball, can solve the problem.

The proposed new circuit will involve the placing of clubs in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Baltimore, Brooklyn, Buffalo and Washington. The plan is to add to the clubs already operating in these cities.

In order to provide players for this new circuit it will be suggested that the National and American Leagues reduce the number of men from twenty-five to twenty. Twenty players and eight pitchers for the use of the new circuit.

OUTMET DENIES TAKING THE BOVINE
AMATEUR RULE

By FRANK G. MENKE.
Frank Outmet, twenty-year-old open golf champion, denies the charges made by a coterie of English golfers that he is a "tainted" amateur, and therefore ineligible to compete in the amateur championship at Sandwich, England, next summer.

This set of English sportsmen claim to be in possession of facts showing that Outmet accepted a bribe by accepting for pay after he had reached the age of sixteen, Horace Hutchinson, an English golf authority, and the amateur rule for this set of English sportsmen.

Outmet, however, denies the charge. "I stopped playing when I was fifteen," he said. "Never after that did I play again. I am not an amateur, but I am not a professional either."

Hutchinson and his set, who are striving to bar Outmet, have large sums of money at their disposal. They are mighty anxious to see the conqueror of Ray and Vardon in action, and they are hopeful that the Outmet will be able to play.

TO INVESTIGATE CHARGES.
The Massachusetts Golf Association, which has authority over all matters concerning golf in this State, soon will make a complete investigation of the charges against Outmet.

THE CAUSE.
Outmet is a student at the University of California, and he is a member of the American Board and Room Association.

Mr. Wilson and Woman Suffrage

He Cannot Interest Himself in the Cause of Women, Says His Opponent—The Democratic Platform, After Him No Such Orders, A Convenient Thing, That Platform

All the women of the United States should vote. The spirit of the times demands it, and the women mean to accomplish it. The matter should be taken up in Washington by the National Congress and the national administration.

Enough States have come in line to make it clear that equal suffrage throughout the nation is merely a matter of time.

Wise action by Congress and by the President would shorten the time and put the women of the country on the proper base of equality.

Committees of women have called upon President Wilson, urging him to interest himself in woman's welfare. Working women and women commanding leisure but devoting themselves to hard work and the cause of justice have urged the President to PRACTICE in power what he PREACHES as a candidate.

Deductive and urgent action by Mr. Wilson would settle the question, and the women know it.

Mr. Wilson talked to the women, expressed great sympathy for the workers and great admiration for the leaders, but said he could not possibly come out on their side. He is bound by the beautiful Democratic platform, says he, and it would be very wrong to do more or less than the platform tells him to do.

It does NOT tell him to urge justice to the women of the country, so he cannot possibly do it. The women urged him to express himself strongly AS AN INDIVIDUAL, if he would not do so as head of the Democratic party.

"Talk for women and their rights NOW," Mr. Wilson, as you did when you were running for votes during your campaign," one of the women urged.

But Mr. Wilson could not do that, either. Once again he quoted his dear political bible and sailing orders, the Democratic platform.

A number of the working women refused his polite invitation to shake hands after the interview—and no wonder.

Women dislike hypocrisy, even classically expressed. They know that for Mr. Wilson to take refuge behind the Democratic platform is absolute insincerity—since he has not for a moment been bound by that platform except when it happens to suit him.

Mr. Bryan, very much like the young lady of London who "ad opes," wrote for the platform a plank binding candidates to the one term idea. That, he thought, would give him a chance after four years of Wilson. But the latter is not heard urging THAT Democratic Bryan-made doctrine. He is as quiet about that as about woman suffrage. It does not suit his notions.

Mr. Wilson says he "must follow the platform of his party and not depart from it."

There is a declaration in the platform in favor of an adequate navy—and in the present state of affairs between this country and Japan, that ought to be THE platform declaration most important of all. But Mr. Wilson has not allowed that to influence his actions or impel him to urge an adequate navy on Congress.

The Democratic platform declares for the protection of American life and property everywhere throughout the world. But this has not impelled President Wilson to protect American life and property or even American honor in Mexico.

It would seem that President Wilson's respect for the platform is limited to the plan that suits him—with the others he has little concern. His real platform is what Mr. Wilson thinks, and he would thus be at liberty to support woman suffrage if he approved of it.

Mr. Wilson would show more courage, and some sincerity—and thus gain at least the respect of suffragists—if he would express his own feelings, rather than hide behind a party platform which everybody knows he does not respect or practice.

The President apparently looks upon women as men often do. They are intellectual creatures, to be patted on the back and humored while a great man is running for office—and politely ignored when the office is won.

Mr. Wilson might have taken a different view of women and their ability to read character and punish insincerity, if he had been in Chicago last Tuesday, when more than one hundred and fifty thousand women went to the polls to register—about twice as many as the men that registered.

Mr. Wilson might even learn something from Chicago's interesting statesman, "Bath House" John, the Alderman. John said at first that he had little use for women in politics, and above all would not CHANGE HIS METHODS merely because women were in the field against him.

Since that time he has announced as part of his campaign the opening of a rum parlor with ice cream and cake added, FOR COLORED LADIES—which is quite a change from his old methods, largely confined to supplying free election whiskey for WHITE MEN.

Quite a jump in statesmanship from whiskey for white men to ice cream for colored ladies.

And Mr. Wilson, before he finishes with politics, may find himself making as much of a somersault.

When the women whom he treats so curiously with silly and insincere platitudes have their turn at the polls, Mr. Wilson may have reason to admire the wisdom of "Bath House" John, who has been in practical politics a long time.

The cynical sophist may be to overtake college boys at Princeton will not satisfy earnest women who have a right to expect sincerity and earnestness in the President of the United States.

Friendship

By ELBERT HUBBARD

THE desire for friendship is strong in every human heart. We create the companionship of those who can understand. The nostalgia of life presses, we wish for "home" and long for the presence of one who sympathizes with our aspirations, comprehends our hopes, and is able to partake of our joys.

A thought is not our own until we impart it to another, and the confession of a crying need of every human soul.

The desire for sympathy dwells in every human heart.

We reach the divine through some one, and in dividing our joy with this one we double it and come in touch with the universal.

The sky is never so blue, the birds never sing so blithely, our acquaintances are never so gracious as when we are filled with love for some one.

Being in harmony with one we are in harmony with all. The lower idealities and clothes the beloved with virtues that only exist in his imagination.

The beloved is consciously or unconsciously aware of this, and endows the one who loves him with the virtues that he himself lacks, and in the contemplation of the transcendent qualities that himself lacks, the lover is raised to heights otherwise impossible.

Should the beloved pass from the earth while this condition of exaltation exists, the conception is indelibly impressed upon the mind, and the last earthly joy is said to be photographed upon the retina of the dead.

The highest earthly relationship is in its very essence divine, for men are fallible and living in a world where material wants, and time and change play ceaseless parts, gradual obliteration comes, and disillusion enters.

But the memory of a sweet companionship once fully possessed, and marked by fate as the most precious of all, never dies.

All other troubles are swallowed up in this. And if the individual is of too stern a fibre to be completely crushed into the dust, time will come bearing healing and the memory of that once ideal condition will chant in the heart a perpetual eulogium.

And I am glad the world has passed forever from the nightmare of grief for the dead; they have ceased from their labors and are at ease to land.

The Old Organ

By WILLIAM P. KIRK

I SAW a parlor organ in a store the other night. A quaint old parlor organ, such as used to greet my night. The once white keys were yellow and the stops were full of dust. And all around the edges ran a growth of grime. A ghastly, gripping shudder swept my happy thoughts away. For it looked just like the organ Cousin Abbie used to play.

My dear young Cousin Abbie, so her mother used to tell. Had taken music lessons and had pleased her teacher well. But all who heard her playing or who listened when she played were sure that pleased the teacher was the money Abbie paid. Her screeching and her discords made a gay world turn to drab; The Spanish Inquisition didn't have a thing on Ab.

With "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "The Lighthouse by the Sea," "Maxwellton's Breeze Are Boony," and "Bless All This World to Me," "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" and then "The Maiden's Prayer." She made our family's night at home one long wall of despair. I left that organ in the store, and scouted far away. For it looked just like the organ Cousin Abbie used to play.

The Mystery of Flying Suns

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—HOW is the orbital speed of the sun determined, and what probable degree of accuracy?

A.—Specific speed of sun in space, flying in every possible direction, are found by means of telescopic observation and measurement of their proper motions. And the constant dwelling in sweet, and recollection on the exalted virtues of the one that has gone, tends to crystallize those very virtues in the heart of him who meditates them.

In-Shoots

The man who argues has breath to waste. It takes a very long time to buy popularity.

True love seldom attains the goal of life. It is hard to forgive our enemies when they have us by the neck. If any writers could hear some persons sing they would compose no more.

Ninety-ninths of the office seekers wonder how the other ten men managed to land.

We all live the cheerful given—if he gives enough. Adversity brings out the grit and prosperity the conceit in man.

—ON—
Amusement—Many Good Men and Women Who Lead Respectable Lives Crave a Wholesome Recreation That Isn't to Be Had—Stanger Asks Information

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX
Copyright, 1914, by the New Company

"WELL, you kind enough to tell me how a young girl is to get acquainted in the city? I go to business every day and always try to conduct myself as a lady about. I dress neatly, but not fashionably. I see the girls around me who are not always chosen for their language being loose and vulgar, while I sit at home. Why is it? At one Episcopal church I even asked if there was a society for young people, and was told it was only for the poorest class and the street girls, to lead them to better things. Where is a decent, respectable business girl to get acquainted?"

This question ought to make all our excellent Christian people and our philanthropists pause and ponder.

The land is filled with working girls and women who are ready to live respectable lives and who are craving wholesome companionship.

In our large cities there are innumerable opportunities for such men and women who are not anxious to walk the path of discretion to bad amusement.

Dance halls and cabarets and cheap shows are holding out temptations continually for new recruits to their already crowded ranks.

The Salvation Army and the people interested in rescue work are doing all in their power to restrain and amuse and instruct the reforming men and women who have been reclaimed from evil ways.

But there seems to be a dearth of benevolent and kindly minded citizens who are making any efforts to give wholesome pleasures and social recreation to the large class of worthy men and women represented by the writer of the letter quoted above.

There should be a committee in every church in America, composed of good women, for the purpose of looking after the needs of respectable and self-respecting working girls and young men.

This committee should employ a public relief man, or woman, to report in person upon all parties.

In every shop and factory of other place of employment where there are many reforming men and women, giving the place and hour where such committees in every church can be addressed or found.

Then, so matter what the religious denomination of a working man or woman, a door will be open to social life if the philanthropist presses to honest and respectable.

It should be the work of these committees to investigate in a reasonable extent the statements of the applicant for social privileges.

Naturally in these days of corrupt political white wash and elections too great care cannot be exercised before allowing men or women are introduced into the society of their fellows.

This very necessity to be worthy of passing before the searching eyes of an investigating committee would make such a social organization desirable.

All this would necessitate the expenditure of time, money and effort.

But why not be willing to extend all these things in preventing evil and in giving pleasure to the worthy and the virtuous and the industrious, instead of knowing all our laborers upon the fact of their fellows?

Why not be as willing to work for the pleasure and happiness and encouragement of our own reforming young men and women who are obliged to toil for a livelihood as to devote no thought effort to raise money for the conversion of traitors in foreign lands?

It is less incumbent upon us to convince the South Sea Islanders that their morality is inferior and to provide him with clothing than it is to provide the workers of the shop and the factory with wholesome recreation and a chance to show their own countrymen and women that they are not inferior.

Are We Nearing a New Ice Age?

By EDWIN MARKHAM

That fascinating book, "Rand and Selt Marshes," a book written by Charles Wentworth Townsend, M.D.—I find many alluring speculations. Here is a bit that sets one thinking.

"In a study of the past it is convenient to have some definite point to which to date. To the original settlers on these shores Noah's flood was a very real catastrophe, which everything on the earth was washed clean; and, by a reference to the Bible of fifty years ago, we learn that the last ice age occurred 2,500 years before Christ.

To our forefathers the time that elapsed since the last ice age was a period to contemplate; but nowadays we are contented to look upon the fifty thousand years that have elapsed since the last ice age as a mere moment of time in the great past.

We are indeed very close to the glacial period, and the interest in arctic life and adventure can interest men and women as never before.

It is well that this love of the ice, which is often incomprehensible to those of southern ancestry, continues to exist; for the glaciers of the Alps and the Himalayas may not again wax and spread over regions now in the temperate zone. May it not be that the present is merely one of the interglacial periods which have occurred again and again during the ice age?"

"Bleeding Kansas's" Part

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

THE admission of Kansas to the Union, Kansas, fifty-three years ago, was the main event of the drama which, beginning with the "Missouri Compromise" of 1820, has been through the years, the struggle for the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854, was to have its final denouement in the boom of the boom at Denver and the gathering of the hosts for battle.

Chas. W. Johnson, the Missouri abolitionist, editor of the "Missouri Democrat," was a slave State, but prohibited slavery in all other territories west of the Mississippi and north of parallel thirty six degrees north latitude. Certainly have worked like a charm for the liberation of the Kansas slave, which was a great triumph for the Missouri abolitionist, since it established the right of the inhabitants of the territory to decide for themselves whether the State should come into the Union as a slave or free State.

Immediately after the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill the political struggle began to bubble and boil; Kansas became the storm center of the conflict of border ruffians and free-soilers; prepackaged clashed with free-soilers in actual battle, pre-battle being in the movement one day and anti-slavery the next; until finally the anti won out and "Bleeding Kansas" took her place in the history of the Nation. The admission of Kansas was the close of the long controversy, preliminary to the more important struggle upon the battlefield.

But for Whittaker's revelation the question of slavery would never have been a menace to the country. At first slavery existed in the North and as well as the Southern States, but owing to its unpopularity it soon practically and not nominally disappeared from the North and the South.
